Training Programs:

ECADemy - At risk high school students are taught to train service dogs to be placed with individuals with disabilities to help them gain greater independence and mobility. These students attend alternative schools on the campuses of residential treatment centers that specialize in helping children with emotional, behavioral, and learning problems. Students learn to set goals and solve problems using patience, communication skills, self-control, frustration tolerance, and motivational techniques while helping individuals with disabilities.

Team Training - A two-week course for clients and their personal care attendants consisting of lectures, dog handling drills and community field trips. To receive public access with their dogs, clients must pass a public access test created by Assistance Dogs International, a written final exam, and a solo skills test in a public setting.

Education regarding the importance of service dogs and disability awareness is provided to the public.
